HON. S. B. ELKINS.

A Deserved Tribute to His Character from a High Source.

BEAUTIFUL ELKINS

And the Model Life He Lives There With His Family-An Eloquent Estimate of the Man-Dr. David H. Moore, Editor of the Western Christian Advocate, Writes of His Trip Through West Virginia and Along the West Virginia Central Railroad.

Ren David H. Moore, D. B., in Western Christian

Anybody can tell you who S. B. Elkins is, the business and Republican magnate of West Virginia, Blaine's right arm and President Harrison's secretary of war. But very few can tell you where Elkins, West Virginia, is. Not very wonderful, for it is only about four years old. Before that, there was a peaceful cross-roads lying there in beautiful Tygart valley, with scattering farm houses and a frame Presbyterian meeting house of respectable antiquity, made historic by its desceration by our troops during the civil war, who used it—to its present pustor informed me—now for a horse-stable, and again for a pig-stye. It is some fifty miles southeast of Grafton, on the West Virginia Central, a road built by ex-senator and his brother, Col. Thomas Davis, ex-secretary Elkins and others, from Bolington, a B. & O. spur, to Cumberland; and which proposes, when President Cleveland's congress makes times good, to push on through Hagerstown and Frederick to Baltimore; and westward possibly to the Ohio.

All the way from Grafton the road four years old. Before that, there was the Ohio.

All the way from Grafton the road follows the Tygart Valley river, mostly a typical mountain stream, which is impeded by great stones tumbled along its rocky bed, only here and there widening out into a placid flow. The great industries are timber and coal, vast companies being at work, and the lands that once went begging at twenty-lands that once went begging at twenty-five cents per acre now commanding from $10 to $500. I was shown one tract, east of Elkins, which, underlaid with coal and richly wooded, cost its owners $2,500. Recently they had sold the timber prtvileges for $27,000 and had the land and coal left.

Some of the people are of the most primitive types, especially the mountaineers. They all go to mill on horseback; and I saw two men emerge from a mountain force-path, each with a bag of grain over his shoulder, trudging contentedly millward. If this areadian simplicity extends to morals also, it is well.

Between Elkins and Piedmont—as I was parmitted to study from Senator Davis's private car, with himself, his charming daughter, and the colonel as my tutors—there is a wonderful development of coal mining, coking, and lumbering in all its forms. Churches are being built; and the roughness so commonly the concomitant of pioneer mining hie is being succeeded by the decency and amenities of refinement, even as the musical tones of church bells mingle with the screeching of engine whistles, and modern school houses and dwellings mark the beginning of a better architecture.

West of Elkins the scenery is picturesque; east of it, in places, it is wild old sublimity itself, wierdly tricked out with garlands of blooming chestnutrees, rhododendrons and laurel. But for the deep, green foliage covering the Alleghenies to their summit, I could have fancled myself whirling asound the curves and loops of the Denver & Rio Grande, in dear old Colorado.

Fairfax is the divide between the Cheat, flowing westward into the Monongahela, the Ohio, the Gulf; and the Potomac, flowing eastward into the Cheaspeake Bay. The West Virginia Central clings to those through the wildernesses as a timid tenderfoot would to a mountain guide. Between Elkins and Piedmont-as I

Central clings to these through the wildernesses as a timid tenderfoot would to a mountain guide.

The names of the railroad stations show the style of men whose brain and money made the stupendous enterprise a success: Rawlings, Windom, Chaffee, Gorman, Blaine, Harrison, Headricks, Davis, Elkins. Cleveland, I suspect, though not interested, will be with the noblest site on the "extension;" for the Davises are a family of sturdy Democrats. sturdy Democrats.

sturdy Democrats.

I often think that had not Providence made Dr. Cranston a lawyer and business man before he put him into our ministry, he could not have become the incomparable agent he is of our great publishing interests. Similarly, the two Davises were practical railroad men, or the add Baltimers & Ohies, the cale, or the add Baltimers & Ohies, the cale, on the old Baltimore & Ohio-the colo nel a conductor, and the senator a brake-man—and thus learned all about rail-roading, and incidentally all about the timber and mineral deposits of West Virginia, and were fitted for the leading part they have played in uncovering the unsuspected riches of the hoop-pole yirgina, and were ited for the leading part they have played in uncovering the unsuspected riches of the hoop-pole state.

Alighting from the care at Elkins, the attention is at once attracted by two immense chalet-like establishments on a high plateau north of the village, with forest slopes rising beyond as a background. It is easy to believe the Tygart to be the Rhine, and to expect gallant knights, with sounding buyles, to claterout from these castles across the resounding draw-bridges, as in feudal times. But as the carriage and noble bays bear young the ascent, through the ample grounds, along winding and shady drives, until you debouch from the glorious woods directly upon the front of Mr. Elkins's summer residence, and you are received with Ropublican simplicity and Virginia hospitality by himself and his gracious wise and children and rugged old father, you find this castle an ideal American home, and learn that the other is the home of his father-in-law, ex-Senator Davis; and that the one over yonder on the next glorious hill is the summer home of Mr. Curran, of St. Louis.

Ishall not attempt a description of this magnificent place. It is given with illustrations in the journals of architecture. But the lovellest thing about it is the happy blending of elegance and homelikeness—riches and simplicity. Its front is toward the woorled-sloping hillside, out of which the grassy plateau has been carved, and over which, with exquisite taste, cultivated and tropical plants are dispersed abroad contrasting charmingly with the luxuriant natural growths. From the rear, overlooking the village, a landscape of hill beyond hill, the green and billowy ocean vistas, spreads out before you, framed by Cheat mountain on the other—a scene of indescribable pastoral lovliness. The altitude, between three and four thousand feet, insures delicious temperature, gentle stimulation, ideal restfulness.

Following Governor McKinley's address before the Egworthers in Cleveland the other day, Dr. Withrow, the Canadian representativ at fault. I was prepared to believe that he was unusually bright, of tireless energy and undaunted resolution;

"rich beyond the dream of avarice;" a great manager of men. But I had fancied he must be of the lean and hungry Cassius order: the fever of ambition lapping up the gentler graces, and driving him, with the cunning of its insanity, to stupendous schemes, and startling and otherwise impossible realizations; not a bad man, but one the very awaep of whose plans puts him on and literary life.

True he plays chess with offices and honor, because he likes the game; it is his pastime. He has a genius for business, and makes money "because he has to." But his real character is domestic. His wife to him is "Hallie" still, their palatial home "Halliehurst," and the dreamy hustness of the Indian summer of his love woos his spirit to constant courtship. His children are his companions; his old father is treated with princely deference and boyish affection. Virgil is his model; he would be a fit companion of Maccenas and Horace, Tibulius and Lauretius, even while he follows his lumbering wains piled with fragrant hay or golden oats, or dreams follows his lumbering wains piled with fragrant hay or golden eats, or dreams in ever new Georgies amid the tinkling bells of his lowing herds, and the buzzing of his bees, torgetful of the dizzy ambitions and mad contests of an inconstant world.

It is evident that I quite lost my heart to him; if such as he were President, the people might well rejoice.

We (the Methodist Episcopals) have the casy lead of all Protestant denominations in Piedmont, with some four hundred members and excellent church property. Brother Bielaski's father, an accomplished Polish officer, was aide to General Grant at Belmont, where he was literally blown to fragments by the enemy's artillery. Speaking of the war recalls the fact that all the region overwhich this little journey took me is historic—Grafton, Philippi, Rich Mountain, Carrick's Ford. Just beyond, between Cumberland and Point of Rocks, I had a little taste myself, including a square meal at Harper's Ferry.

How beautiful Deer Park, and how animated Mountain Lake Park by night! It was up-nill work to come down hill from the inviting mountains that lie only ten hours from Cincinnation the Baltimore & Ohio.

WETZEL INSTITUTE, The Teachers Still Enjoying a Pleasant and Instructive Masting.

NEW MARTINSVILLE, August 10 .- Yesterday afternoon the proceedings of the institute were more interesting than at any former session. During the time that the discussion of the subject of Phy-losophy was being discussed the interest was intense. The discussion was ably opened by Prot. J. M. Skinner.

The speech of Prof. Barnes on the teacher's duty as to the teaching of the effects of intoxicating drinks and narrotics on the burner system was very effects of intoxicating drinks and narcotics on the human system was very affecting and gave the teacher a true insight as to his responsibility in the great work in which he is engaged. The professor has never known by experience the taste of intoxicants of any kind and his appeal for not only temperance, but total abstinence, impressed all who heard it. He also drilled the institute on vowel as unds, which proved very profitable as well as interesting.

"The Star Spangled Banner" was sung by Miss Bucher, all joining in the chorus, as was also the "Red, White and Blue."

At night the following programme was carried out:

The subject of language was intro-duced by H. E. Flesher in an interest-ing talk, and it was continued by Messrs. Shriver, McGee and Taylor, and Misses Gorley and Jackson. The in-structors also each spoke on the sub-ject. Take it all in all, no subject yet discussed before the institute has clacussed before the institute has created more interest than did this one. The subject is one of the most important the teacher has to deal with, and the manner in which it was treated showed that Wetgel county teachers are fully aware of and awake to its importance. After recess "God Save Our Native Land" was sung to the tune "America," closing with the verse published in this morning's INTELLICUNCE. Roll was called, which caught quite a number of the teachers who forgot (?) to return from the recess kindly given them. How like children we all are, loving the bright sunshine better than the shade in-doors. The enrollment now reaches nearly 100, and there are more to come. more to come.

Prof. J. W. Barnes continued the subject of phsychology, taking for the sub-ject of a short talk "The Nature of the Mind." He has the faculty of treating Mind." He has the faculty of treating this dry subject in a manner to interest all. His talk this morning was especially cell received. The remainder of the forenoon was spent by Prof. Crago on the subject of "Civil Government," confining the lesson to the executive and judicial departments of our government. The teachers as a class are much interested in these lessons.

A Nice Point.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 10 .- In the case of our minister to Italy the President has a nice point before him for dent has a nice point before him for decision... Mr. William Potter, of Pennsylvania, the present representative of the United States in Rome was appointed by President Harrison last November in place of Governor Porter, of Indiana, who resigned to take part in the campaign. The Italian government has since made Baron Fava an ambassador, and the question now is whether sador, and the question now is whether the United States will reciprocate by naming an ambassador instead of a minister plenipotentiary.

For Dan Lamont—The President to Leave Him Single Handod and Alone.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 10 .- A Washington special correspondent tele-graphs his paper: "Within ten days Mr. Cleveland will return to Buzzard's Bay and no matter how important the reason that takes him there, the effect will be a tendency to disorganization, and those who have carefully watched the situation from the inside are of the opinion that it will be almost impossible for him to hold his party together for any concerted action on the financial issue.

Good Advice.

In August, 1892, J. W. Vannoy. of this place, had a severe attack of flux. A physician was called who treated him for four or five days, but as he continued to grow worse the family decided to have the aid of another doctor in the case, and sent to Ravenswood for a prominent physician of that town. Before he arrived, however, I had some conversation with the physician in attendance, and said to him: "I believe Ohamberlain's Colle, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy worthy of a trial." He resally consented and I gave him a bottle. One dose of that remedy gave reliet. When the doctor from Ravenswood arrived his advice was, "Keep quiet and continue using Chamberlain's Colie, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy." Which we did and in two days was cured. C. B.
